NATIONAL REPORT REINFORCES IMPORTANCE OF WASHINGTON'S CLIMATE RESILIENCE WORK - PART 1

Last spring, the warmest May in Washington state history forced an early end to Washington's snowpack, leading to a statewide drought advisory in July and a drought emergency for many parts of the state. May through July last year was the fourth driest in state history. Then, in August, devastating fires tore through communities around Spokane. And even with the rains returning in the fall, conditions remained both warmer and drier than typical.

Is this the "new normal"? If the future brings more of the same, will we be prepared? With so many challenges, how can we prioritize our efforts and our investments in building a more resilient state? These are the kinds of questions a new national report is designed to help answer.

The National Climate Assessment stands as a comprehensive and sobering analysis of the current and future effects of climate change, including the impacts we're already seeing here in the Northwest.

As we navigate the complex web of challenges, Washington state is taking steps to prepare for, respond to, and recover from current and projected climate impacts across the state. The Washington Department of Ecology is at the forefront of our state's climate resilience work, paving the way for a more sustainable and resilient future.

The National Climate Assessment

The assessment is a product of collaboration among scientists, experts, and federal agencies, intended to provide an in-depth understanding of the climate challenges facing the U.S.

Released at a critical time, the latest assessment highlights the urgency of addressing climate change and underscores the need for immediate action. From rising temperatures and extreme weather events to the impacts on ecosystems and human health, the report paints a stark picture of our current reality and the potential consequences if we fail to act.

"The National Climate Assessment reinforces the risks we face from climate change — and the harmful impacts we're already experiencing," said Jennifer Hennessey, Ecology's special assistant on climate resilience. "It highlights the importance of all of us doing our part to reduce the harmful impacts of climate change on people, our livelihoods, and environment."

Climate risks in the Northwest

The report stressed the need for faster and deeper cuts in greenhouse gas emissions globally, as well as accelerated adaptation efforts; otherwise, severe climate risks to the U.S. will continue to grow. And it reinforced the importance of the work we're doing at Ecology and in Washington state to reduce emissions and to advance climate resilience.

The effects of human-caused climate change are already far-reaching and getting worse in every region of the U.S., not just here in the Northwest. By continuing to implement Ecology's climate work, we can do our part to reverse these trends and to better prepare our communities, infrastructure, and environment to protect them from the worst impacts.

Be sure to read Part 2 of this article in next week's Exchange for more details!

"The Outdoor Insider"

You've got to love this weather. Mid 40s in February? I like it. I am going get my boat ready and take advantage of the mild winter and get out on the water. Where to go first is the question. There are a bunch of good options, and I can't wait to try a few. Until then, I explored some of the bank fishing opportunities in the region.

I decided to check out Billy Clapp Lake instead of fishing in the rain the other day. I know people were fishing from the shore there. This reservoir is drawn down in the winter, and the water is quite a distance from the end of the boat ramp. The trout fishing in the winter can be so good at Billy Clapp that people will drive across the sand and launch small boats. When I arrived, I spotted an angler parked at the water's edge with a couple of rods out, so I drove down to see how he was doing. He had only got one bite, but he saw a huge rainbow swim by right next to shore. So, he knew there were some big ones out there. Billy Clapp seems to have two distinct populations of trout. In the spring we catch rainbow that are about 14 to 16 inches, which are probably the result of the previous year's plant. Then there are carryovers that weight from 3 to 5 pounds. Sometimes there are quite a few of them.

I was headed up to Coulee Dam to check on some of the fishing and was curious to see to if there were still any ice fishermen out at the bottom end of the lake. I was relieved to see there were no ice shacks out there, and I didn't see any sign of recent activity. If you are familiar with the fraternity of anglers that like to fish for whitefish on Banks, you know these guys will be looking for another way to get at them. I turned into the Northrup boat launch to see if the ice had cleared off. I found a thin sheen of ice at the ramp and about 30 feet out a band of what appeared to be just slush. The wind had come up and it wasn't going to be cold enough to freeze that evening, so I figured it wouldn't last long. I stopped by there again on my way home the next day and all that was left was a bunch of slush. You can bet that there will be people launching boats here very soon. The ice is off the north end, and I saw one boat out there.

I spent the evening in Coulee Dam recently, at the Grand Coulee Center Lodge. This is a great place to stay. I booked my room and got a call back in about five minutes. The person at the desk forgot to ask me if was bringing a boat. They always save space for boaters in the parking area, and you can charge your boat mount electric motor overnight. When I checked in at the front desk the person there told me a guest said he landed a 23-pound triploid earlier in the week and went back out and got a 26-pounder the next day! So, off I went to the middle net pens the next morning. There were two anglers fishing from the shore when I arrived, and I set up just up the shore from them. I cast out two rods, baited with Power Bait and waited for some action. I didn't see any fish rolling until I was there about an hour. Then one jumped right in front of me. Turned out he was on my line and threw the hook! It was raining hard by then, so I headed for home.

I had plans to do some fishing from shore at a couple of different locations this last week. This is something I often do in the winter months when my boat is covered up and out of service. Over the years I have refined the equipment I need for a day of shore fishing and it all fits in a backpack. I keep it handy and before I head out I just grab this bag and go. Inside is a foam leader holder with several pre-tied leaders. When I break off they are ready to be tied on. In a small box I have egg sinkers and barrel swivels. Also, there are several rod holders and jars of Power Bait. I also have a bag of marshmallows in case I want to use jarred shrimp or nightcrawlers. Also included in the "go bag" for a day of shore fishing are rags and fillet knives. There are gallon zip lock bags for fish. All I need now is to grab a couple of spinning rods. Now I am ready to go! This week's photo is of a nice rainbow caught at Crescent Beach at Coulee Dam.

I've made a couple of trips to Rocky Ford recently, and my wife reminded me of one our favorite experiences there. We were fishing at the bottom end where there are some pools. I had hooked a fish that ran upstream, around a rock and broke me off. I sat down to tie a new rig, and when I looked up I noticed that my indicator, that was still attached to the leader, was moving around in the pool. Huh, I thought maybe I can retrieve it. I dug out the largest Wooly Bugger in my box and tied it on. I made a couple of casts over the old leader and the hook slid up to the indicator. The fish was still on, and I managed to pull it in, release it and get my fly back. My wife Eileen was as amazed as I was, and probably wouldn't have believed it if she wasn't there. On my last trip to the Ford, I wasn't as lucky. I wasn't getting any interest in my my scud and indicator. I found an Egg Pattern that Darc at the Desert Fly Angler Shop had tied up for me and it worked, I finally got a bite!

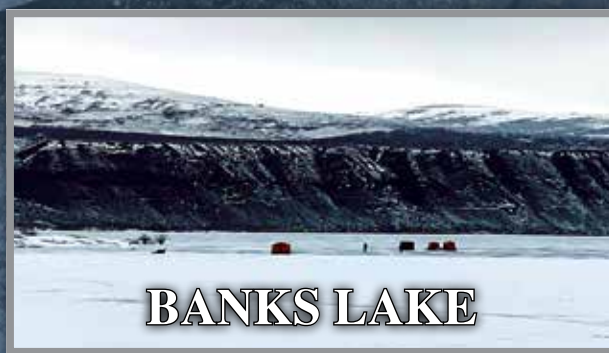

The rainbow fishing on Lake Roosevelt has been terrific this winter. This may be the first place to try when I have the Smoker Craft ready to go.

As interest rates begin to tick slowly down, you may be considering saving money to buy a home this year. Home buying is one of the biggest purchases a person will make. Preparing to buy a home doesn't just involve deciding on a location or scrolling through images of homes online. You'll need to dive deep into your finances and prioritize your home feature preferences to help your home buying process be manageable. Here are a few steps to help you get started:

Determine Your Budget for a Home
Figuring out what you can afford to spend on a monthly mortgage payment may seem like an obvious place to start, but it is an important one. Experts say that your total monthly home expenses should be at most one-third of your gross monthly income. Mortgages are different from making a monthly rental payment. When you're a home owner, your mortgage payment is only part of your monthly expenses. You must also take property taxes, home insurance and interest into account.

Check Your Credit Score
If you're not an all-cash buyer, you'll likely need to finance the purchase of your home. Checking your credit score is another important first step. Your credit score will help you determine the financing options available. Lenders use credit scores to determine if a borrower has a record of on-time payments and to gauge the likelihood of repaying the mortgage. Your credit score will also impact your mortgage terms. The higher the score, the more financing options and lower interest rates will be available.

Create Your "Must-Haves" Checklist
As a first-time home buyer, you must list your "must-haves" for your new home. Do you need flexible space for a play area or a minimum number of bathrooms? It would be best to have a general idea of the size, location and amenities you want in your home. Determine what features you will compromise on to ensure your home fits your budget.

Shop Around for a Mortgage
Lenders will have different mortgage rates, so doing your homework is important! Shop around to find the lowest rate, or work with a mortgage lender to help you find all the loan options available. Several types of mortgages are available, including Federal Housing Administration (FHA), conventional, adjustable rate and fixed-rate. You'll need to learn more about them to determine which option works best.

Buying a home is a considerable investment in time and money. To help you find a new home or for more home buying advice, contact the Central WA Home Builders Association.

QLISPE RACEWAY 2024 DRAG SCHEDULE RELEASED

AIRWAY HEIGHTS — The former Spokane Raceway Park — now Qlispe Raceway owned by the Kalispel Tribe — has announced its 2024 schedule for a milestone season.

Thirty drag racing dates are on a schedule that marks the 50th anniversary of the motorsports complex in Airway Heights. The road course schedule has not yet been released and the oval track remains closed while awaiting possible updates.

Spokane Raceway Park officially opened on Memorial Day weekend, May 24-26 in 1974 when it staged the American Hot Rod Association Spring Nationals where the top titles were won by Don Prudhomme in funny car and top fuel by Gary Beck.

While those days are history and will not return, Qlispe's 2024 schedule has a handful of events featuring both nitro and blown alcohol cars in June, July and August.

June 21-23 is Nitro Jam that also features jet cars and fuel altereds. A month later (July 19-21) is Thunder Night with more alcohol-fueled cars.

And on what used to be one of the traditional AHRA World Finals dates — Aug. 9-10 — the program headlined by West Coast Pro-Mods, also features more alcohol cars, too.

The bread and butter of the track's operation are the sportsman or bracket racers who compete in a variety of classes. Eight points races are scattered through the season that stretches from April through September.

Qlispe offers 10 different sportsman classes for all kinds of vehicles ranging from motorcycles and snowmobiles to dragsters.

While these "bracket classes" are effectively able to compete against one another with a handicapped start, they do run according to similar elapsed times (ET's) and speeds. For instance if one car travels the quarter-mile in 14 seconds and another in 16, the slower driver is given a 2-second head start.

Another handful of races are termed "no-prep" which refers to the fact that the race surface is not prepared ahead of time with traction compound. No-prep track resembles an actual street.

Following a chassis certification on April 20, Qlispe's first race event is the following Friday, April 26 with No-prep Street racing. Several no-prep nights follow.

A notable change over the off-season was the hiring of Ben Zimmerman as the track's operations manager. Zimmerman has been readily available since his hiring to answer questions.

That "no-prep" track will be much improved in 2024 following an extensive grinding and resurfacing project that took place in the final few weeks of 2023.

"We hired TVC to come and surface grind the drag strip," Zimmerman wrote in a Facebook message. "They are taking out the bumps and low spots so the track is as smooth as it can be. Just one of the many upgrades this facility needs."

Spokane County purchased the track in 2008 and renamed it Spokane County Raceway, selling it to the Kalispel's in 2021. It sat idle for 2022 and opened to a full racing program in 2023.
